EDITORIAL.

The editors are pleased with the success of first issue of the "Northeastern." The favor and encouragement that it has received from the public urge us to make each following number better and more worth while.

If it continues to have the loyal support of the student body and friends of the Normal it will prove a potent factor in helping both.

The editorial staff is "new," but "we learn by doing." Watch us.

Much space is given in this number to the Formal Opening of the Northeastern State Normal and the Inauguration of the President. We ask a careful reading of these articles and especially the inaugural address of the president. It outlines the aims, scope and policies of the Normal.

All of the exercises of the memorable "Sixteenth" showed the work of the Northeastern Normal to be pitched upon a high plane. The daily schedules were executed as usual in all departments which were thronged with visitors. The observing ones could see that this normal stands for the best in education. All the work in all departments show earnestness and energy, neatness and thoroughness, ease and dignity. The frivolous and superficial do not find a congenial place here. Again, we ask you to read the "Northeastern" carefully and if you are skeptical at all, visit us and we will "show you."

ATHLETICS.

Northeastern stands for clean athletic sports.

The athletic phase of our school work is still growing and more enthusiasm is being manifested daily in its pursuit.

While our attention has been almost wholly turned to football and the football squad has been the center of our gaze we would not lose sight of the girls, who so zealously worked for places on the basketball teams and who were ready to enter the contest for the honors of the eastern part of the State.

However owing to the failure to get the uniforms in time no games were
