An Outing on the River

Quite a diversion from the week of labor was an outing on the river enjoyed by the ladies of the faculty, a few friends and President and Mrs. Redd.

Boundinot Point was decided upon as the best place to stop and unload. After the baggage had been disposed of, a party of explorers was organized and sent out to discover all they could of their surroundings. When the party had traversed as much of the country as possible, they returned to join the others on Boudinot Point, willingly giving Miss Davis all the glory of their explorations. It is said she reached the bottom of the river. If so, we hope to read an interesting account of her discoveries.

As the sun began to sink in the west, a camp fire was lighted. Potatoes were roasted, bacon broiled, and doubtless each fair maid read her future in the shining coals.

Then came the most interesting part of all—the lunch. Many tempting dainties were spread before this goodly company and lavishly partaken of by each.

When the evening shadows began to creep around them they were reminded by President Redd that it was time they were returning to the city. They reluctantly bade farewell to their beautiful surroundings and departed having enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon.

A Pleasant Affair

One of the most pleasant entertainments enjoyed by the faculty and students of the Northeastern State Normal was the social given in the Presbyterian church by the members on Friday evening, September 17, 1909.

A novel plan was devised for acquainting strangers with each other. On their arrival, each guest was presented with a card, with the request that he get as many names as possible during the evening. The plan proved a very successful one.

Refreshing punch and wafers were served throughout the evening.

When we say we had a most enjoyable time with Rev. Miller and the members of his church, we but half express our real appreciation of the invitation extended to us to attend the first church social given in Tahlequah since the opening of our school.
